A fixed term of half a century from the date of registration, that date being necessarily affixed to a book, in order to make the republication of it illegal, 40 ON THE CARE OF BOOKS. ON THE CARE OF BOOKS. (From the London Saturday Reiriev.) The spread of circulating libraries, it is to be feared, does a great deal to foster bad habits in the care of books. These institutions tend to breed a democratic disrespect of the personality of books, and they encourage the lax notions already only too prevalent with regard to property in the book form. With many people the raison d Stre of a book is to be borrowed; the owner owns it that he may lend it, and the borrower is in no way bound to take care that he returns it as he got it--if, indeed, he returns it at all. For bringing out any latent selfishness there may be in the character there is nothing like a borrowed book. The man who will be as careful of your horse as of his own....
