Excerpt: . . . SAULS CONVERSION By The Rev. CHARLES H. READ, D. D. April 1B. --Acts 9: 1-18. The genuine conversion of any lost sinner of our race unto God through the grace and power of the Godhead--Father, Son and Holy Ghost--is a marvel of divine love, and must ever be regarded as the most momentous fact in the experience of that soul. The vast issues of life, death and immortality are suspended upon that experience. There will be a sublime revenue of praise to God from the salvation of any soul, and yet in the sovereignty of divine grace some souls have an eminence given to them and to their recorded history and services which challenges special attention. Saul of Tarsus, the persecutor of Christians, and afterward more commonly known as Paul the servant of Christ, is lifted up into eminence in the history of the New Testament. This distinction at the first mention of him is painful to contemplate: he appears at the martyrdom of Stephen, consenting to his murder and guarding the garments of those who stoned him to the death. He may be presumed to have witnessed the whole scene of the cruel stoning of Stephen, of his solemn and calm commitment of his soul to Jesus, then and there revealed to him in the opening heavens, and that he heard the prayer of Stephen as his soul took its flight: Lord, lay not this sin to their charge. Yet, with this scene...
