Excerpt: .mob it was, which, hooting and hissing, and with murder in their hearts, followed Jesus to Calvary. After lunch we took carriage and drove to the quarry of King Solomon, from which the stones were taken for his temple and for the wall of Jerusalem. It is near the Damascus Gate, on the north side, and begins at the city wall. It is different from any quarry we ever knew or heard of. It is a tunnel under the city. The city is built on hard limestone rock, which protrudes in places ten and twelve feet above the surface. This tunnel dips downward and widens out as we get farther in, with numerous galleries to right and left. It must descend fifty feet or more, and these subterranean chambers honeycomb the city. There are miles of them. Some have never been explored. We saw...
