Excerpt: . . . uld be required before medical information is shared with others. However, it may not be necessary in other situations, such as when calling patients, when scheduling appointments, or answering questions about medication interactions when patients call providers. Finally, I want to address one concern up front. We will not hear today from an administration witness. When an initial inquiry was made by us, the Department of Health and Human Services indicated that it could not provide a witness to testify on the regulation until the comment period ended. We have since learned that the Department does not face any legal obstacle but, rather, that the regulation issued by the previous administration is currently under review and policy analysis by the new administration. In light of the change in leadership at HHS and the complexity of these issues, I understand the Departments position. However, I also appreciate very much the concerns raised by a number of our colleagues. I know we will hear those concerns in opening statements this morning from members...
