The epic adventure, The Minstrel's Song concludes in this the fourth volume of the tale. Laura and Stewart must now enter the eastern kingdom of Ankara, an island archipelago long isolated from the rest of the world, where rumor has it an ancient abominable social order persists. Though warned not to venture into that land by Amenophis, the wisest man in Reelobha, Laura believes she has an understanding with the High Priestess, Kalista, which will assure her safety. The problem is - which side is Kalista really on? His ambition unabated, Quantos and a few of his magician-priest supporters travel to the beautiful volcanic island off the east coast of the Verdenia mainland to meet King Thaddeus and enlist his help in their quest for dominion. A delicate game ensues in which the priests risk enslavement to gain the King's trust; but the King could be putting his entire realm at risk if he in turn becomes a tool in the priests deadly game. Ankara begins to build its army of mercenaries which will rely on...
